

Tanglewood Features:

Kevin Mahogany's Kansas City Revue

By Charles Giuliano - 2007-09-03

Three's a charm as Summer came back for an encore with a glorious final day of Labor Day Weekend's Tanglewood Jazz Festival...

The day long performances started with an expansive Kevin Mahogany who matched the legendary Kansas City Blues singer, Big Joe Turner, on every level...The performance in tribute to Turner touched on all aspects of the unique Kansas City sound that spawned the Count Basie Band and the beginnings of Charlie Parker as well as a unique style of boogie woogie piano.

He was joined by a flame headed belter, Kathy Kosins, who did a nice job with "Morning Glories"...The crowd got into it and demanded an encore. Here Mahogany ...got down and dirty with a soulful version of "Send Me Someone To Love."

....expansive and boisterous set....
